Whichever way the wind doth blow,
Some heart is glad to have it so;
Then, blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.
My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas;
What blows for one a favoring breeze
Might dash another with the shock
Of doom upon some hidden rock.
And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to wait on my way.
But leave it to a higher Will
To stay or speed me, trusting still
Through storm and calm He will not fail
Whatever breezes may prevail.
Then, whatever wind doth blow,
My heart is glad to have it so;
And, blow it east or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best—Selected.

Blockade by Sea

Major General David L. Stone, supreme commander of the defenses of the Panama Canal. These defenses this genial Southerner has striven mightily to uphold, not only in a military sense, but by cultivating the friendships of nearby Latin-American countries. In the World War, General Stone served in France with the Third Division.

And to support them, more pack artillery. Some people think that some armored cars and tanks would help. Roads Are Worst Worry Roads! They are the worst headache for those who must defend this frontier. Rain has washed out all the concrete roads and slowed down work that is absolutely essential to enable the fort's defenders to get about. And this rain lasts more than half the year!

So bad is the situation that rain or none, work is expected to start on a road along a stretch of the Atlantic coast not fully protected by jungle. But in the inviting gap on the Pacific at La Venta, the situation is different. Not far from shore runs a road that after Army trucks have tried it out a little, looks like the slough of despond. The Republic of Panama, in whose territory this road runs, has been unable to do better, but now Congress has voted $1,500,000 if Panama will put up $2,500,000. Whereupon President Arce made an official visit to the new Ambassador in Washington to try to borrow the money. President Arce made a remark to me that other Latin-American countries seemed to be doing pretty well for themselves in Washington—countries that mean less to the United States than does Panama.

Treaty Not Ratified Our future relations with the Republic are bound up in a treaty that furthers the "Good Neighbor" policy by recognizing the United States' present right to make use of any Panamanian territory outside the 50-square-mile Canal Zone that we deem essential to defense. But what if Panama for any reason refuses some concession essential to the Canal's defense? Should we take that chance? Evidently the Senate Foreign Relations Committee thinks so, for on June 21 it recommended that the Senate ratify the treaty as Panama has.

The same treaty brings up another defense question. There is now no road clear across the Isthmus, connecting the Atlantic and Pacific sides. For almost half the distance the sole connection is the U. S. Government-controlled Panama Railroad. Were that railroad put out by air bombing or sabotage, troops could be shuttled back and forth only by boat on Gatun Lake. The road that would change this Panama will build within ten years. So says the treaty, drawn up before Munich shocked us into the present effort to make the Canal Zone impregnable overnight.

Blockade Is Possible The Canal's best defense is, of course, the Fleet, whose shuttle from ocean to ocean it is. But the Fleet might conceivably be occupied elsewhere, might even be beaten. If one believes the Fleet invulnerable then why have any soldiers here at all save airmen and anti-airmen? But if in the present situation the Canal

MRS. MAUDE HOGAN, aged 56, had always held that while automobiles and bicycles and airplanes and such contraptions were all right "for them as wants 'em," she herself would cling to the conveyances which she understood and loved. She had a genuine affection for horses. She could handle mules, too. But for day-in-an-day-out service when she was out hunting in the wild Arizona hills she would take burros every time. Burros are humble, dependable creatures of amazing endurance but negligible speed.

Five in a row, carrying tent canvas and groceries and water canteen and pick and shovel and sundry utensils, look like a sort of huge gray caterpillar inching across the mountains. Mrs. Maude Hogan walked beside such a caterpillar this morning. If she felt like it she could ride one of the burros, but Mrs. Hogan was a pedestrian who rarely felt tired.

She guided her charges through Joshua trees, making a short cut over the Dale ranch, and after topping a low hill she could see the deserted town of Goldcrest yonder in its historic canyon. It didn't impress her, Mrs. Hogan was not given to esthetic considerations. She saw in the colorful hills not the artistry of nature, but the chemistry of it. Green cliffs waited a sculptor's hand, but a possible deposit of copper ore. White granite-like formations to her were not "wilderness castles created by the Master Architect," but were just rocks which might be crushed to show some valuable gold. Mrs. Hogan's husband had been a poor prospector, and when his children grew up she herself took to the hills. Whenever she got lonesome at it she came in and worked for Mrs. Dale. She had been there, canning apricots for Mrs. Dale, when the young and bubbly Roselee hired her.

She trudged dutifully up the deserted main street of Goldcrest at 10 o'clock this morning, paused in front of the Ace High Hotel and "YOO-HOO-O-O-O!" Nobody answered and she halted again. She looked in two or three buildings, and then because her eyes were keen to detect outdoor phenomena, however small, must be impregnable, as military opinion agrees it should be, it must be able with its own resources to hold out against two enemies. First, blockade.

Suppose that instead of daring the guardian big guns, an enemy fleet should just sit down, beyond their range, and aided by planes, try to prevent food ships from entering the Canal.

What if Fascists Win? The second menace is missed attack by fleet and air power, upon the Canal. That might be the first move in a drive by victorious Germany, Italy and Japan, from the Atlantic and the Pacific to shake down the United States and the Western Hemisphere.

What if the Fascist navies were augmented by ships of defeated Britain and France. The Army and Navy cannot afford, in making plans, to dismiss that as impossible, however remote it seems to some. Britain and France won the last war only at the last minute—by our help.

How remote—at the rate things happen today? Remote as, for instance, will be made impregnable—at the present speed? That speed, which Congress has set, is good-for-peace time. And of course, there is no open war; though down here the atmosphere is surely less peaceful than at home.

At home, they seem to be gambling that war will not come until, at peace time speed, we have got the Canal all ready. And that will be a matter of years. The Canal being our lifeline, that is quite a gamble. Unless some one has read Hitler's mind.

So small is the body of the hummingbird that, when stripped of feathers, it is no larger than that of a bumblebee.

she saw tracks leading up the street toward the old Goldcrest mine shaft.

"Git! Git along!" she ordered her burros, and moved with them to follow the tracks.

DUST was still eddying, settling when she came to the gaping hole in the mountain side that marked the old mine shaft. It alarmed her at once.

"YOO-HOO!" Miss Roselee? She cupped her hands behind her ears, and heard enough to make her move swiftly. In scarcely a time she had jerked her lantern and a pick off a burro, and was hastening into the yawning mine shaft herself. She went down its slope at a trot, fear in her old heart. She had been around mining people all her life. She knew some of the dangers that beset them.

For once, though, Providence had been kind. Mrs. Hogan labored for no more than a quarter-hour when she caught Christine Palmer's hands and pulled that pale and frightened girl through a rocky hole.

Together they extricated Roselee, then Frankie Laraway, and finally big Dick Baneroff. Despite the danger they had faced Dick managed now to look at all of them with a reassuring smile. There was a great deal of talking and shaking and thanksgiving and trembling, and when they came to daylight again the young people realized they had been imprisoned for almost two hours. Mrs. Hogan inspected the girls.

"You're both pale in yer gills," she declared. "Why you woulda got out presently, with Mr. Richard here a diggin' that way, honey! But I shoulda got here sooner. Your ma'll chide me for neglectin' you like this!"

She comforted Roselee, dusting her and talking affably.

"Only thing, Mrs. Hogan," Franklin put in, "we were afraid our diggin' would cause another cave-in. And we didn't have any tools, or any sort of light. I lost the flash, like a baby! We knew we were diggin' right because we could get a whiff of fresh air, but we were sure scared. We owe you plenty for happenin' along."

"That ain't so, son!" the good lady said, but she beamed under his kindness, even so. "You'd a got out. I'm curious. I'm a goin' back down in there for a spell just to look it over, right now."

She disappeared down the shaft and the young folk trudged back toward their High Hotel.

Their own good spirits had already revived remarkably.

"Well!" Roselee breathed, presently. "We're off to a fine start. We planned to thrill a lot of tourists, and we begin by thrilling ourselves! Anybody too scared to go on?"

"Nuts," said Dick, matter-of-factly. "Let's get to work. Anybody got the money buried in there. It's under some of that fallen rock, safe as possible. Let's scatter as planned. And stay out of dangerous places, you guys!"

ROSELEE looked happily at him. She liked the way Dick Baneroff took charge of things. Without a further word he and Franklin left them—they had already agreed on the order of the first day's work—and she watched the two handsome youths striding toward Franklin's car. She was looking more directly, however, at Dick himself.

"Isn't Dick the best-looking thing that ever walked?" Christine breathed then, surprisingly. Roselee turned to look at her friend.

"Why—Christy?" "Him?"

"Are you? Why, yes! Dick moves gracefully. He is a fine athlete, remember. I—I think we're lucky to have him here."

Roselee turned the talk into business. But in her heart had been planted a sudden new worry. A vague, undefined little worry. It is true; quite inconsequential as yet, but recognizable. Roselee looked up to study anew Christine's erect posture, her long slender legs and shapely body, the hair waves and the proud set of her head which made her friend distinctly statuesque.

"You are beautiful, Christine!" Roselee declared, suddenly, and meant it. "And sweet."

Christy looked at her a trifle curiously. "Sure! Just discovering it, kid?" She thought it merely a matter for kidding and fun.

"Prettiest thing in Arizona—next to you. Shall we go call Mrs. Hogan and get her settled first?"

They wouldn't venture again far into the shaft, and they heard her coming back out anyway. The good woman's eyes were lighted with something more than the presence of daylight when she came from the hole. She held five or six egg-shaped rocks in her hands, clenched them close to her.

"Children," she spoke excitedly, "I always say trouble is right frequent a blessing in disguise."

"Why, Mrs. Hogan? Why do you say that?" Roselee looked curiously at her.

"New mind! You wait, honey, till I'm shore what I'm a talkin' about!"

Roselee changed the subject. Perhaps poor Mrs. Hogan was just an old lady getting a little queer, she guessed.

Malvern Pastor at the Tabernacle

Rev. C. H. Asher Preaching Here Wednesday, Thursday, Friday

The Rev. C. H. Asher, pastor of the Assembly of God Church of Malvern, will speak Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights this week at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle, according to an announcement made today by the retiring pastor, Rev. Bert Webb.

The Rev. Mr. Asher is one of the outstanding ministers of the Arkansas District and has done a very commendable work in Malvern. It is possible that he may be given an invitation to become the pastor of the Tabernacle congregation. He has spoken in Hope a number of times and it is the general opinion that he is one of the most able preachers ever heard here.

Mrs. Asher will accompany her husband, and a general invitation is extended to the church and public to hear and become acquainted with these folk.

The services begin promptly at 7:45 each evening. There will be an enjoyable service each night which all are invited to attend.

Takes Church to Picnic ALTAMONT, Kan., July 10.—You can miss church services but get religion anyway in Altamont. The Rev. Hector Green, noting many absentees at Sunday services, has offered to "come and preach" whenever a group of 20 or more gathers on a creek bank for a picnic.

EURIPIDES WAS RIGHT

The ancient philosopher, Euripides, is credited with the saying:—"Whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad." Isn't it true today? To lose our friends, our wives, our jobs, or our business, we need only to lose our tempers.

Do you find yourself inclined to be grouchy, easily irritated or offended? Perhaps you are bilious, or as we Southerners say, you have so-called "Tropical Liver," so prevalent in hot weather. All you may need is a little Calomel or better still, Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet that makes calomel-taking a pleasure.

Calotabs is what the doctors call "a cholagogue" or bile-expelling laxative and diuretic. It gives you the combined effects of calomel and salts, yet is just as pleasant and safe as ordinary purgatives. One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of water or sweet milk. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirits bright and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish and go about your work or pleasure.

Genuine Calotabs are sold only in checker-board (black and white) packages bearing the trade mark "Calotabs." Avoid imitations or substitutes. Family package only twenty-five cents; trial package ten cents. At your dealer's (Adv.)

Nail-Throwing Pigeons Cause Puncture Hazard

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 10.—The Rev. Ward Davis spoke to the janitor at his church and suggested he sweep nails away from beside his church building because he thought they might puncture tires.

"All right," said the janitor, "but there'll be more there tomorrow. The pigeons toss them down."

The Rev. Davis thought he was being spoofed but said nothing about it. Next day he bent over to pick up another nail. One hit him on the head.

"I looked up and there was a pigeon, peeping over the edge of the roof," related Mr. Davis.

The pigeons not only were tossing nails but staples, tacks and little round washers. Fortunately there is $11,000 in the renovating fund to repair the 50-year-old building.

Proposed Adoption of Texts Fought

Education Group Assails Adoption Meeting Scheduled Friday

LITTLE ROCK—The textbook committee of the Arkansas education association, changing that a meeting of the State Textbook Commission scheduled for Friday to adopt four new school books is "inopportune," called on the commission Monday to delay the adoptions "until competing books can be studied." The commission will receive bids to furnish history, safety, language and conservation books for use in elementary schools beginning in 1940. The A. E. A. committee said the texts should not be adopted before July, 1940, "as permitted by law." Members of the committee are: R. A. Cox, superintendent of North Little Rock schools; C. E. Cook of Fort Smith, W. D. McClurkin of Blytheville, R. E. Baker of Garland and D. C. Hastings of Crossett. J. R. Bullington, principle of West Side Junior High School, resigned from the committee several weeks ago. A statement issued by the committee said:

"Adoption of new books now is inopportune because the Textbook Commission has not had an opportunity to study books on which bids will be received, as required by law. "Of the nine members, Dr. O. L. Williamson of Marianna is dead, the terms of W. E. Baker of Kingsland and R. L. Smith of Eureka Springs expired June 11, Secretary T. H. Alford has been absent from the city three weeks attending conferences at Nashville, Tenn., and San Francisco, and Governor Bailey has been in the East in the interest of highway bond refunding. "Adoption of books 14 months before they are to be used is gambling with future prices. We feel the texts should be adopted in the same year they are to be used, as in New Mexico and Oklahoma. "The committee also said: "We have been informed that four book companies are considering the withdrawal of their bids for reasons best known to themselves."

Will Be Back TOLEDO—"Detroit needn't worry about Fred Hutchinson," says Myles Thomas, manager of the Toledo Mudhens. "Freddie will be back on the big time in the fall, sure as shooting. "He's learning fast. He has pitched more than 120 innings since he joined the club and has finished every game.

he started, in addition to doing some nice relief work. "Considering the fact that he's playing with a tail-end club that can't go out and get him runs, I'd say his pitching performance is pretty stick. "Another thing that pleases me is that he's beginning to catch on to the batters' weaknesses and playing on them."
